This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

GENERAL REVIEW OF PHILIPPINE COMMERCE FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1911.

Exports for the fiscal year 1911 reached a total value of $39,778,629 and practically maintained the high record established in 1910. Imports were to the unprecedented value of $49,833,722, but while there has been a substantial development in trade, the apparent increase of $12,766,092 is to be discounted by the fact that the above fiscal total for the first time embraces all imports by commercial vessels and includes considerable amounts of Government supplies and railway free entries excluded from the commercial totals of previous years.

The relatively large and not strictly commercial character of Government supplies suggested their exclusion, while the free-entry privilege under previous tariffs served to identify and make possible their exclusion in most cases. But with the extension of free entry to all imports from the United States and the assessment of duties on all imports from other countries, the motive for a declaration of Government supplies as such disappeared, and the inability to effectively exclude as in the past has necessitated the adoption of an inclusive total, which in 1911 not only embraces a value of $4,532,379 from the United States consigned to Government supply officers, and $314,965 of identified railway supplies entered free under act 1566 of the Philippine Commission, but also an unknown amount of unidentified railway supplies from the United States and Government supplies both foreign and American, substantially all of which was excluded in earlier years and entered only to a reduced extent in the total of 1910.

Revised import and export schedules were inaugurated in July, 1910, and a feature of the published returns for the year is the large increase in commodity detail. The number of items has been doubled, and considerable new information will be found throughout both imports and exports; but in view of the large values involved most importance attaches to the finer subdivision that has been made in the import cotton trade. The American exporter has found this his most successful field with the removal of the tariff barrier, and it is gratifying to be able to present more detailed information on the subject.

Returns for the year show that in the relatively small imports of unbleached cottons the United States supplied the trade with only minor competition from China and the United Kingdom, while American prints, as well as dyed and colored cottons, also led in the market, but with the United Kingdom a considerable contributor of both classes of goods. Bleached cottons were more than half of British origin, with American a close second, while a relatively small trade in embroidered cloths was almost wholly Swiss. Hoisery was chiefly from Germany, and to a less extent from the United States and Japan. Knit underwear was very largely Spanish and German, with Japanese and American in decreasing order of importance, while ready-made clothing was conspicuously from the United States. The considerable values for handkerchiefs and laces were chiefly British. Cotton thread was from the United Kingdom and the United States, but the American exporter did not figure to any extent in the more important yarn trade, in which the Japanese lead was followed by British and Swiss.

Dyed or colored cloths were the leading feature in the trade, with a value exceeding $2,500,000. Bleached cloths amounted to slightly less, while print goods were valued at $1,852,097, and these three classes of textiles constituted about two-thirds of the ten million dollar cotton trade for the year. Of this amount $4,192,849 was furnished by the United States. The United Kingdom for the first time failed to maintain the conspicuous lead of the past and was credited with $3,523,224, while Japan took third rank with a total of $875,548. The increase in American trade was over two million dollars, but in this Government supplies figured to some extent. Imports from other countries as a whole suffered a slight decline. British trade slightly increased, while purchases from Japan were somewhat less, but with a striking increase in yarns and knit goods at the expense of reduced values in textiles.

Imports of rice were second in importance only to the cotton trade, and amounted to $6,560,630. Increasing dependence on foreign rice, which has been the recurring feature of recent years, also characterized the figures for 1911, and the quantity imported was the largest since 1905. The low price that prevailed throughout 1910 gave place to an upward movement and toward the end of the year was approaching the maximum of recent times. This in connection with the large quantity resulted in a larger value for the year by $1,238,668. Explanation is to be found in a reduced local production, as indicated by the estimate of the insular bureau of agriculture and increasing consumption by reason of improved industrial conditions. Large quantities of wheat flour were also imported, but lower prices resulted in a smaller value than in 1910. American trade constituted $952,831 of the total of $1,422,279, with considerable imports of high-grade flour from Australia.

The iron and steel trade for the year ranked third in importance, with a value of $5,887,185, but Government supplies serve to discount to a considerable extent the large increase over the figures of 1910, those identifiable under direct consignment from the United States to supply officers amounting to $987,300. The total value of iron and steel from the United States was $3,909,519; from the United Kingdom, $965,982; and from Germany, $514,407. Hawaii, which for statistical purposes is reported separately from the United States, figured in this trade to the extent of $215,000 for sugar-mill machinery. The distinction gained by Hawaii in modern methods and scientific sugar production has resulted in the development of some prestige in the local manufacture of mill equipment, and the letting of the contract in connection with the installation of the first large modern sugar plant in the Philippines went to Hawaii.

Imports of coal amounted to 499,712 tons, valued at $1,548,437, of which 92,512 tons from the United States was all for the Navy. In addition, the Army contract for the year was for 65,000 tons of Japanese coal, while the Insular Government contract was for a smaller quantity of Australian coal. Local production has also been actively carried on during the year, and the output of the leading mine is stated to be one hundred tons per day, with pending improvements in equipment that will raise its capacity to 100,000 tons per year. A million-dollar illuminating-oil trade was to the extent of $857,395 from the United States, with imports of the Sumatra product reduced to smaller proportions than in several years.

Under the general title of meat and dairy products there were imports to the value of $2,900,028, in which Government supplies figured to a considerable extent, and Australia was the leading source, especially in the case of fresh meats and butter. The growing condensed-milk trade reached a value of $623,541 and was chiefly British and American. Fresh beef amounted to $851,200; was almost entirely from Australia; and was to a considerable extent for Army consumption. The cattle trade greatly increased and reached a value of $1,490,500. In previous years it was mainly supplementary to the fresh-beef trade and for slaughter in Manila, but large imports of draft animals were a feature of 1911. Work stock are essential to the development of the sugar industry, and some measure of the activity in this field is to be found in the fact that of the 19,276 head of carabao imported during the year, three-fourths were entered at Iloilo, adjacent to the most important sugar-producing section of the islands. Both beef and draft cattle were almost wholly from French Indo China. A promising beef-cattle trade from Australia was stopped early in the year in consequence of quarantine regulations, while a decline in import value of Chinese cattle from a half million dollars to $36,115 is attributed to the same cause. With a view to stamping out local cattle diseases the insular bureau of agriculture has given special attention to imports as a source of reinfection, and toward the end of the year measures were in progress looking toward the proper safeguarding of the local live stock from imported disease without hampering unduly the foreign beef supply.

In the country distribution of the import trade for the year the United States was conspicuously in the lead, with a value of $19,483,658, or about 40 per cent of the whole. French East Indies ranked second, with a total of $7,415,881, made up of rice and cattle, while the $6,290,169 credited to the United Kingdom was, for the most part, under the cotton and iron and steel trade.

In the export trade for the year the practical maintenance of the record value realized in 1910 was the result of rather mixed conditions in the matter of production and prices. Manila hemp, though still holding foremost rank among exports, shows a reduction in quantity as well as price; copra and sugar grew in prominence, the former chiefly through better prices and the latter in consequence of larger output; while in the tobacco industry a heavy decline in the volume of cigar shipments was, to some extent, compensated for by materially larger exports of leaf.

Hemp conditions for the year were generally unsatisfactory, except for some improvement in the prices for higher grades. Exports amounted to 163,033 tons, valued at $16,141,340. There was a five thousand ton reduction in the record output of 1910, and the average export price was steadily downward throughout the year, resulting in a decline of five dollars a ton in the annual average, and in the establishment of a new low record price. The conditions that resulted in a large American market for the Philippine fiber in 1910 were not maintained, and the unusually heavy exports to the United States of 97,737 tons in that year declined to 65,484, while the proportion of the total exports credited to the United States, as well as the actual value, was smaller than for any year since the act of Congress of March 8, 1902, established the direct hemp trade.

A striking feature of the American fiber market during the period of exceptionally heavy exports to the United States in 1910 was the close approximation in prices between what is termed "Fair current manila" and "Sisal," and the larger consumption was coincident with a campaign of education adopted by American manufacturers in behalf of the Philippine fiber and mixtures instead of sisal for binder twine. But with the decline in hard-fiber prices during 1911 the Mexican product became relatively cheaper, American purchases of sisal substantially increased, and hemp exports to the United States suffered the material decline above mentioned. Such hemp as went to the United States was at a higher price, but this did not very materially offset the reduced value consequent upon smaller purchases. The British market, to a large measure, absorbed the surplus, and exports to the United Kingdom increased from 56,263 to 76,771 tons, but at a price very considerably below that of 1910. In this connection it is to be noted that while the American market is conspicuously a manufacturers' market, the British hemp trade is to a considerable extent a merchant trade for further distribution.

Copra ranked second among the islands' exports and realized a value of $9,899,457. The quantity was 113,775 tons, and was only a nominal increase over that of 1910, but in consequence of a fairly sustained price throughout the year at the high figure realized toward the end of 1910, the value was about three-quarters of a million dollars greater. Shipments to France did not differ materially from those of the previous year and amounted to $6,140,343. Those to the United States were more than doubled in value and amounted to $1,030,481, while a fairly constant Spanish trade for several years back took third rank.

The leading feature in the sugar trade was increased production. Exports were 147,016 tons as compared with 125,699 in 1910. There was only a nominal difference in the price realized, and the value of $8,014,360 shows a larger output to the extent of about a million dollars. Shipments to the United States were 126,889 tons, while almost the whole of the balance went to the China-Hongkong market. The total exports were below half the allowance fixed by Congress for free entry into the United States, and fell a little below the figures for 1908, the maximum year of American occupation. Reference to active development in the industry is, in a measure, confirmed by imports of sugar-mill machinery to the value of $507,902 in 1911 as compared with the nominal sums of earlier years, as well as the large imports of draft animals already referred to.

The great export activity in the cigar trade that followed immediately upon the passage of the free-trade legislation, and was maintained throughout 1910, showed a sharp reduction in the first months of 1911, and exports to the United States that amounted to 83,931,000 in the first year of free entry declined to 22,974,000 in 1911. An overstocked market caused by undue eagerness to take advantage of the new field without a proper estimate of American taste has been given as an explanation for conditions that existed at the end of 1910. To overcome an unfortunate impression concerning Philippine cigars, believed to have been created by the character of earlier shipments, measures were adopted for the limitation of the proportion of low-grade goods destined for the American market. The figures for the year show a substantially higher price, and there are indications in the returns for the closing months of a recovery in trade.

Cigar exports to other countries declined slightly, and was as heretofore chiefly to the nearby countries of the Orient and to Australia. Total exports for the year were 132,217,000 valued at $1,700,712, and though these figures are much in excess of those prior to free trade, the conditions of the American demand account for a smaller yield to the industry by $1,272,918 than in the previous year of maximum activity. In addition to shipments to the United States, there were consignments to Hawaii valued at $92,663, which under free-trade conditions is proving a market of some importance.

Coincident with the reduced local demand for leaf in the export cigar trade, shipments abroad were larger and at a reduced price. Exports of unmanufactured tobacco increased about five million pounds, and amounted to 27,436,494 pounds, valued at $1,842,992, of which a value of $1,234,685 was credited to Spain, while almost the whole was taken by European countries. Exemption from the heavy American import duty was without result in developing a market, and shipments to the United States amounted to only $1,700.

Among minor exports the increasing shipments of maguey fiber were again in larger quantities, and on the basis of lower prices amounted to a quarter of a million dollars, while a three hundred thousand dollar hat trade became distinctly American.

IMPORTS OF MERCHANDISE.

[Beginning July 1, 1910, imports by articles are based on a new schedule, giving the classification of commodities much more in detail than the schedule in effect prior to that date, and owing to this change it is impossible to make comparisons by articles in some instances.]

EXPORTS OF MERCHANDISE.

[Beginning July 1, 1910, exports by articles are based on a new schedule, giving the classification of commodities much more in detail than the schedule in effect prior to that date, and owing to this change it is impossible to make comparisons by articles in some instances.]
